

SENATOR CARSTEN: Well, maybe I am. I just didn't...

SENATOR DECAMP: Okay, that would have, as I understand it from Gary Rex, that has really nothing to do with this issue or this particular thing. That is having to do with the central indexing system and getting information into the computer from all these respective county clerks. Does that make any sense?

SENATOR CARSTEN: Well, it probably makes sense all right, but it is new language. That is not old language at all.

SENATOR DECAMP: Yes.

SENATOR CARSTEN: It is a procedure that...well, just reading it, it just didn't come through.

SENATOR DECAMP: Okay, I'll tell you what I'll do, while the next person is speaking I will run out to the back and ask Bill Peters, who does understand this, and I'll bring back an answer.

SENATOR CARSTEN: Well, I don't want to hold it up.

SENATOR DECAMP: No, no, I understand.

SENATOR CARSTEN: I just want to be clear on it. Thank you.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Haberman.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Mr. President, how many lights do you have on?

SENATOR BEUTLER: Seven lights.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Seven, okay. I'll just ask one question. I was going to ask a couple. What is the criminal penalty, Senator DeCamp?

SENATOR DECAMP: It is a Class I misdemeanor, but we are creating a whole new system. It isn't just a penalty. We are changing the whole system.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Well, I'm not concerned about...I understand you are changing the whole system. Anybody can figure that out by looking at the amendment.
